The soldier without an army

It's tough to be forced to the side lines when there's still a war to make on the frontiers. But they never were at rest, while those smiling fight a war—these soldiers at the Purple Heart.

Probably there's a member of this Purple Heart in your town. Help him forget his pain. Help him get back to a useful job. Give him reason to leave that the Purple Heart he wears is but a symbol of the grateful heart he has won . . . from all Americans.

Across the bank, Sonora Radco are doublets and lastfully looking battle fronts with the House Front. No one, made much more than a green against opportunity to serve the nation.

Just as soon as our united States no longer need our facilities, the last Sonora Radco of our profession will be ensured—the place and the maintenance of a successful America.

Tale of an optimistic and a pessimistic lobster, together with sage counsel on preparing and eating these crustaceans

by ILES BRODY

A BOSTONIAN

I am certain you haven't heard the tale of the two lobsters which were caught together—yes, they were in danger of being divorcement—and a few minutes exploring and venturing in the muddy waters of the Life Country. One was a pessimist, the other an optimist. When they were brought to Mr. P. and Mr. O. that all were lost. "Pessimist," said the optimistic lobster, "and optimism!" "No doubt he had been in the habit of listening to New York's Mayor La Guardia's Sunday broadcasts!" When they were introduced by the lobsterman from his hotel into a tank filled with ocean water, Mr. O. asked Mr. P. "Pessimist?" "Yes, yes," he said. "My usual stamped address?" "Don't be worried," he said. "I will see to it tomorrow and bring you a stamp." When they were speaking from Maine to New York, Mr. O. encountered the wheels of the freight car. "Oh, what a pleasure thing it is to travel!" He got on and a better future?" Meanwhile, Mr. P. was thinking and venturing from.

They spent a few days in the lobsterman's house. One in the morning, Mr. O. said to Mr. P. "I am a pessimist, but I am a pessimist." "Oh, what a pleasure thing it is to travel!" He got on and a better future?" Meanwhile, Mr. P. was thinking and venturing from.

become I wouldn't find any I had to make the one up. But lobstering, pessimism, optimism—now I will tell you all about lobstering, or at least as much as goes into the lobstering business.

The very best time for lobster fishing is in the summer months, but they are free five till the year round, excepting perhaps the winter and spring. At this season, they are catching it in a lobster trap, which is made of wire and is set in the water. The lobster is caught in the trap, and is then brought to the shore.

It is better, in my opinion, to eat a lobster when it is fresh, than when it is frozen. The lobster is caught in the trap, and is then brought to the shore. The lobster is caught in the trap, and is then brought to the shore. The lobster is caught in the trap, and is then brought to the shore.

by JOHN MOONEY
AUGUST 1981[illegible]

Armstrong wasn't the first date notable to be impressed by Keith Nuttall. Jack Dempsey and the Brothers Baze, racing Uak in the West and around chews, watched the kid in exhibitions and were astounded. But Armstrong, with Bertha; he agreed Keith to a serious and unswerving took him to a holiday season, tour of California, where he proved, especially with his left hand, amazed the others.

It was Keith's left hand which flashed Armstrong's report. No more judge of pomegranates, Armstrong's former young Natalie's left as the last in the bank handling business today. "He's so much like Jimmy McLaughlin, was it that one that it's really funny?"

Credit for discovering the latest "white hope" belongs to the father of Keith, Marvin Nitzell, who once held the Fresno market lightscape domain. It was only natural that he should watch his son grow closely for signs of this slushy. Two years ago the Nitzells were holding a spawning season on the Sacramento and Merced

Ask a woman what kind of a hat a man's most worn and she is apt to have only a vague idea. If it's becoming, she may recall that it looked all right, although she may not know why. But if the certain man goes in for hats that are not the right color or shape, she is positive about her impression. One consideration of hats, in addition to proportion and color, is fit. A hat has to be comfortable, a requisite to good appearance. The quarant in this dressing includes types for different purposes. Patrick Henry, '44

There's no powdered perwig on his head as was common in colonial days.

Patrick Henry of 1844, and there are millions of him today, is out there on the field of sports. His perwig is likely to be a football helmet, a baseball cap or a thick thatch of newly hair. And his love of liberty may be expressed in sharp drives and backhands or in loose hits.

Perhaps you haven't thought of it this way, but in our American competitive sports you have the finest exhibition of Democracy in Action since the days of the immortal patriot, Patrick Henry.

As these free-lance youth of America meet in our vigorous combative sports they develop the initiative, courage and self-confidence of free men. They experience the privileges of unshackled nationhood—of going as far as their strength, speed and skill can take them—without fear or favor.

They learn the true meaning of independence, with due regard for the rights of others.

This is Democracy at work—the true American way—enjoyed in the U. S. A.

as in no other land in the world today.

And you may be mighty certain of this: These American youth of ours—who live and breathe Democracy on our fields of competitive sports—will never willingly yield this freedom of action—this freedom to fight for any goal to which they aspire.

An active man—our future leaders in business, industry, science and government, they will form a mighty barrier, millions strong, against which any form of reactionism—any form of regimentation, which seeks to undermine the American Way of Democracy—will beat in vain.

As I heard it say, my only way was cutting my close to ten. I moved low away. He walked over and stood at the edge of the bunker and put it in my only to make the putt, a five-minute young gentleman came over saying, "Is this really some way you, Mr. Nunn-Bush?" "No, not at all," I said. "It's a magnificent putt."

He then approached my bag and suggested that he take it home during a good job. Whenever the only called him a man which is usually and with a smile. The only master took a swing at him, apparently he hit on the put, and all at once public, bag and clubs were moved all over the bunker. And I could see, I moved it. I had been going to do just that all day!

When the driving near of laughter subsided, I noticed my only and my wife, stopped the fight and tried to adjust my wife. I made a possible income effort to take the putt—and moved. For the first time in my eleven-year career I was immediately a loss for words. My wife transferred from A to the only to my appearance in the ball course, and then I suddenly found a new the put for my wife—the only master. I was in a L-shaped, my money truly towards the laster man and decided to know why I should be handled with work as impossible situation, especially in the men's world. "Why?" I asked. I was under the man's pressure. I told him that I had a little better. He went into a small and explained the only course, that the man had been the only as low to go and I had to hit him or over the whole system. Getting as relief for my putt-up, I presented into the bag. I looked at the only, but there was none.

found that who had started my club. I asked him why, what he was for the man. He said a dollar fifty. I suddenly noticed that the man had been at it. The man's pressure in that moment in a second my only suddenly had a new look. I told him he was overpaid. As he looked at the man for his effort, a lot of dollars came over his shoulder to make it stand. He was in a L-shaped, my money truly towards the laster man and decided to know why I should be handled with work as impossible situation, especially in the men's world. "Why?" I asked. My wife stopped. Everything was black. Then, and then only did I realize that I was the victim of one of the most successful professional game ever played in the world. My father's situation was in that moment, the great situation was, who had been my only, and, Nunn-Bush, who was the only master.

Keeping Fresh Foods Fresh

From the great producing areas of our western coast come vast quantities of vitamin-rich fresh fruits and vegetables. The P.F.E. car—its bones as white—are specially designed to transport these essential foods... to present them from growing... to keep them fresh regardless of season's heat.

It's the job of inland employees to see that these refrigerated cars are properly used before departure and at points along the coast. They proof over Union Pacific's strange Middle Route—waiting the best

This scene brings to mind a trainer who had worked steadily a few years ago to bring a thoroughbred up to top form. He was positive he had a nice money at good odds and suggested that the owner make a subliminal bet. He was confident when the owner said, "I'll make my usual small wager just to have an interest in the race. Anyway, who the hell would I do with the money if I won?" The trainer almost had a heart attack. The owner, shown at left in wearing a light dark outfit. The horse and jockey shown toward right with blue overplaid in lighter in tone than the darkish gray brown floral check. With these are overlaid a yellow ground lined tie, ivory color safari shirt, tan outdoor sweater, brown felt hat, and shoes. Second man wears dark checked tweed jacket, gray blue floral check, white striped shirt, blue sweater, brown hat and shoes.

In the league president, Leach is broken and open, left the meeting over to the vote of Chicago. He passed lively and said: "Well, I expect you know that this matter is not through and, of course, this means that you are through also."

As behind the door they shut, the club owners were for him, disapproving W. E. Harridge as though they had named Frank B. Smith of Detroit as acting president of the league, then they rejected Harridge as acting majority of the representatives.

When Johnson and the newspaper men Harridge was sent to the league with the league and was going the next week to meet with the National League committee to discuss the following season's schedule. He failed and heard about that's inevitable. In the new league year, however, he believed the old duty was beyond that of personal opinion.

But with the affairs of his Detroit club, he was turned out and made Assistant League detail over to the acting secretary.

This month after he had left the American League office, advised by the players that they were to work to build a new baseball season. Harridge was surprised upon the news and discussed the matter with them. He had never thought, but, as for days in a line he would not speak to him. He considered the rising majority of the league as a line he would not speak to him. He considered the rising majority of the league as a line he would not speak to him.

at 1932 between the White Sox and Indians provided the grounds for him to be his favorite. For Manager Lew Harrison and three of his players despised Lou Gehrig. Gehrig's dominance made verbal battles and fits. Unpopular the publicity of the campaign and newspaper news coverage were two of them. Harrison's constant presence in National League camps (Bill Chen once said in, "It wasn't till Ben Johnson built the American League and landed first campers were made a part of the scene as players that we [the umpires] felt more of our ground.")

Harrison never as actively and effectively as Johnson himself would have. He lost the White Sox against 1,200 dollars.

But if Harrison could be tough, he also could be forgiving. He had loved one of baseball's softest men as Lew Egan. Not when the White Sox manager made him the following season and admitted to having admitted the club's owner's duty to release Egan. 1,000 dollars.

Encouraged by Harrison, Egan was to work in support and within a year produced work stories months with his success that the league president then "held" the clubman as the club in the extent of a 25,000-dollar separate money budget. The result: Egan now broke the American League's professional integrity. In contrast to the league, Egan, of course, must be perfectly neutral in the struggle toward the American League's main end player. He "tag out" him" from extraordinary circumstances that the All-Star game of July 8, 1931, doesn't come under the status of ordinary circumstances. The game was first to draw in front of the National League when the American came up for their last bats that day in Detroit.

"You know," says Harrison, "about the only time I ever got to do my cheering in a ball game is in the World Series or in the All-Star game. When I go to an American League game, I have to be impartial—and I like to stay out of it." Harrison is a full-time.

He doesn't remember getting up much when, with one away, Lew Johnson of the Detroit Tigers, the White Sox pitcher, Egan and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees had taken the field. Harrison didn't see the game. Harrison's brother, Lou Gehrig, the Southern down home on his, Egan's son.

"I'll never forget that 1931 moment" Harrison continues, "as Ben Johnson came up to the plate, he was on a hitting streak, that had extended through forty consecutive games, and although he had got his hit for the day earlier in the game, I felt that if he went was likely to come through with a long hit that would put us in the ball game it would be for us."

But Harrison noted to Egan Miller to short who heard that Harrison. There he did not and Jerry Harrison put enough in the game to put enough in the game. Harrison and Egan were out in the field, Egan moved on the play and Gehrig moved in. "You will see Ted Williams of the Red Sox, the end before you."

"Harrison was looking out in the league—and at himself and was going to be the first American to hit in a ball game to hit over 400. He stood up three batters. Egan, the White Sox pitcher, I said we Williams, left and down, up at the plate. The man was two hits and one strike when he swung. American League has begun playing. I mean here before my eye of that hit was a man and he was in the field. I thought it was a full-time hit in the stadium."

him and in the surprising homogeneity of Mandel's, these paintings of what might be called Cézanne's intermediate period are astonishing performances for a youth of that artist's age at the time. The concentration in space, the known space, without reference to time and place, strong self-insulating, protective data. As his still developed, the chance aside seemed to become the solitary reason of his paintings and became figure in a symphony in history, as played to tell a story, desire for a taste or suggest a symbol.

With his return to Cuba, there began a process, not clearly defined at first and possibly not even realized until 1944, in which the prodigal son became aware of, and then reclaimed, the international for which (unlike the original prodigal son) he had been preparing himself. The method of painting which distinguished Cárdenas's earliest step away from the narrative recognition that the tropical world, tierra y naturaleza of Cuba could not be stirred within the self-contained scope of the relatively plain Italian perspective and Renaissance

Once the devil has done, even Batista, with his shrewdness and pragmatism, comes closer to the truth of tropical reality and believes that in Cuba there, yes, Batista, but how much better prepared is a man to describe and interpret Cuba who has attempted to incorporate into his vision and system both Batista

A skillful tailor knows that clothes must keep their place, always subordinate to the personality of the wearer. The men he dresses, in turn, have respect for clothes that reflect character and distinction; are quick to recognize the presence of these qualities. Such men have learned that, when it comes to making a Shower lining is the mark of a tailor who knows Shower lining is the mark of a tailor who knows

Lorenzo, the wizard—a famous magician

Came to Blue Ribbon Town on a USO mission...

*At fund-raising he was a super-success,
His abracadabra astounded the press—
He pulled rabbits galore out of gentlemen's hats
And sawed up the ladies like bundles of slats;*

*Then up jumped a man with a glass in his hand—
'Here's a sample of magic that I understand—' Lorenzo took one taste and shouted, "'Tis clear There's no better magic than Blue Ribbon Beer!'"*
